COUNCIL FLIP FLOPS

DiGiovanni proposal accepted

By ALLAN KRASNICK
Managing Editor

Mario Di Giovanni's circuitous four-year effort to establish a modular home and accessories plant in Terrace has finally received municipal approval.

The Terrace developer, owner of Madig

Construction, received council approval for his project, yesterday, as the district once again flip-flopped on the issue.

Mayor Dave Maroney was joined by Ald. Jack Talstra, Doug Mumford, Vic Jolliffe, and Robert Cooper in supporting a motion to enter into a land use contract with the developer, thus legitimizing his construction to date. Ald. Helmut Siesbrecht and Dave Pease dissented. The property is presently zoned for agricultural rather than industrial use.

Di Giovanni has contended that he purchased the Graham Street property in 1973 after assurances from municipal staff that its agricultural zoning was subject to revision to industrial use.

When told that he was restricted, at the time of purchase, to construction of agricultural buildings, Di Giovanni determined to call his structure a potato warehouse, even though, according to his statements in a June 8 Herald interview, he never intended the building for this use.

The land will continue to be zoned agricultural but under designation as a development area, its new industrial use will supersede the zoning designation.

The pair whose reversal prompted acceptance of the by-law were Jolliffe and Mumford. Jolliffe said he changed his mind after searching the Di Giovanni file at city hall.

He said Di Giovanni had done nothing illegal, was offered and accepted a land use contract, and, when asked by the city to accept new provisions in the contract to protect the public, agreed to the amendments.

Mumford said he originally rejected the application because he felt himself lacking in the knowledge to support a go-ahead. He at first tried to table the motion when it arose before council last month, he told the meeting, but when this effort failed, he voted "no", hoping it would once again come up.

Opportunity to reconsider Di Giovanni's case came when Mayor Maroney, exercising a prerogative he enjoys under Section 180 of the Municipal Act, re-introduced the by-law for fourth reading. He required a two-thirds vote of council to negate the previous rejection and, when this was granted, discussion on the re-application ensued.

Helmut Siesbrecht, consistent in his opposition to the scheme, said he dislikes it not because of the tactics the developer has employed but rather "on the basis of land use."

"It's just lousy planning," Siesbrecht said.

The alderman reviewed the city's involvement with the developer.

To suggestions that an agreement between municipal administrators and the development constituted a binding pact, Siesbrecht expressed disagreement.

"The city is responsible but not committed to what our staff says," Siesbrecht declared.

He added that he disliked being "lumped in with other aldermen who opposed (the application) on the basis of the tactics used."

Pease agreed with Siesbrecht about the incompatibility of the industrial proposal in the residential-agricultural area.

"I've opposed this since I can con council for the same reasons (as Siesbrecht)," Pease explained.

"It's just not logical to have industry there. I've seen no fresh information to cause me to change my view."

Kick out 3 MLAs, says Macdonald

VICTORIA (CP) — Three Social Credit MLAs, two of them cabinet ministers, are no longer eligible to sit in the British Columbia Legislature, former attorney-general Alex

Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said Monday.

Macdonald called on Attorney-General Garde Garmod to take action against Recreation Minister

Sam Bawlf, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt and George Kerster (Coquitlam), after Housing Minister Hugh Curtis told the legislature that some of their expenses had been paid by the government.

The Opposition said this is contrary to the Constitution Act while Curtis said the payments were legal.

The MLAs were members of a committee set up last year to investigate roadblocks in the delivery of housing in B.C.

Curtis tabled in the Legislature documents which show the government paid $1,881.82 to cover expenses of the three MLAs, including a direct payment of $107.58 to Hewitt.

Accompanying the expense sheet was a memorandum from deputy housing minister Larry Bell to an assistant deputy minister instructing that "no expenses related directly to the MLAs on this committee are to be passed for payment from departmental funds."

SEEK OTHER SOURCES
"It is the intention of the government to seek alternate sources in order to compensate the MLAs for these expenses."

Macdonald said the documents confirm that the three received expense funds contrary to the Constitution Act and they now are ineligible to sit as MLAs.

He noted Curtis expressed regret and "further intimated that while the expenses were paid by his department, they should not have been, and had not been repaid by any of the three members concerned."

Cyril Shelford, MLA for Skeena, unveils the plaque for the new wing of Mills Memorial Hospital in Terrace Monday as a $7 million savings was made.

Dignitaries open new hospital wing

A record number of local dignitaries attended the opening of the Mills Memorial Hospital psychiatric wing Monday. The large crowd was indicative of the many people who have worked towards the expansion of the hospital through two provincial government administrations.

Five years of planning and fighting government was realized when Jim Dong, president of Pacific Coast Enterprises handed Wayne Epp, hospital board chairman the keys to the wing. Leo Donahue, vice-president of B.C. Health Association, presented the board with a gavel from the association.

The new wing houses the psychiatric unit, the kitchen and dining room on the lower level. On the ground floor is the administration offices (which now face onto Haugland Ave.), medical records, laboratories, X-Ray radiology departments, physiotherapy and emergency plus a remodelling of the operating room. The shelled-in upper floor has space for 25 beds and an existing modern intensive care unit.

The wing, budgeted for $6.3 million, was under budget by $7 million when completed. The hospital has now gone from an 85 bed facility to a 103 bed facility.

Cyril Shelford, MLA for Skeena, unveiled the hospital plaque which was covered with a flag of Canada. Health Minister Hugh McClelland then reminded those in attendance that $500 million will be spent on health care facilities during the next five years. He said science has eliminated most of the serious "killer" diseases and a lot of poor health today comes from careless living habits. He said people should be careful what they eat and how they drive, they should watch their drinking habits and avoid smoking.

Also attending the opening from Victoria were John Glenwright, associate minister of health, Hugh McGann, construction and inspection of B.C. Hospital Programs and Ray Goodacre of the department's planning section.

Local representatives included members of past and present hospital boards, regional districts, municipal governments, other hospitals in the area, local hospital staff and administration and the public.

NEWSPAPER CHARGES

Kerster interfered with ICBC

VANCOUVER CP — The Sun says the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia paid several claims it had earlier refused after Social Credit MLA George Kerster asked the government-controlled corporation that they be paid.

The evening newspaper said documents in its possession claim Kerster intervened in one set of claims with Norman Bortnick, ICBC vice-president and general manager, who then ordered the claims to be paid.

Kerster SC-Coquitlam said Monday he intervened in the claim procedure, but claimed he was "doing my job as an MLA."

The documents state that three claims by a Leslie Wood, turned down because they were suspect, were later paid on Bortnick's orders, in one case specifically, after an unnamed MLA got involved.

"I remember this one," said Kerster about the Wood claims. "I spent a whole day up there."

ICBC spokesman Bev Penhall said Monday Kerster's intervention was investigated by ICBC president and Education Minister Pat McGeer, and the charge of political interference "was found to be groundless."

"Mr. Kerster was in Bortnick's office, but as an MLA, representing a constituent."

DISCUSSED CLAIM
Another set of documents show that Kerster discussed with ICBC officials another claim on damages to a car stolen from the Dodge dealer of which he was president and general manager before he became an MLA in December, 1976.

He terminated his connection with the firm three months before the claim was filed with ICBC and six months before he contacted ICBC officials over the matter.

"All of these allegations, if not substantiated, aren't worth a hill of beans," said Kerster. "This is stupid. They're getting into a smear campaign."

I was told by somebody in the corporation that some people are out to get me." In Victoria, McGeer rejected any interpretation that Kerster had improperly interfered with the Crown corporation.

He said a thorough investigation two months ago found Kerster had not acted improperly. Kerster, said McGeer, just as any other MLA or member of the public, had prodded ICBC into making a decision on cases that had been left idle.

McGeer said the outcome of the claims had nothing to do with Kerster's intervention; rather the judgments were made solely on the grounds that ICBC would have lost had the claims gone to court.

Later during question period in the B.C. legislature, McGeer again denied that Kerster had acted improperly. He later tabled with the legislature the results of the investigation into charges of wrong doing against Kerster.

James Kirkup, did not attack Christ but glorified Him by asserting Christian beliefs and speaking of love for him.

Mrs. Mary Whitehouse, a well-known moral and anti-pornography campaigner who made the complaint that started the prosecution, declared at the end: "I simply thank God... A line has at least been set."

Lemon, 32, told reporters he was "shocked and disappointed," and the National Council for Civil Liberties condemned the verdict as "a dangerous new form of censorship."

Artists and writers, the council said, "must now conform to the standards of a religion practised by only a minority of the country."

Lemon and Gay News were convicted of "unlawfully and wickedly publishing a blasphemous libel concerning the Christian religion, namely an obscene poem and illustration vilifying Christ in His life and crucifixion." The poem was printed last year.

Copies of the poem were distributed to the jury and reporters in court, but the judge directed that it not be printed in the press. The last man found guilty of blasphemy in Britain, John William Gott, was a secularist pamphleteer sentenced in 1922 for selling two of his works, Rib Ticklers and God and Gott in a London street. His health suffered in jail, and he died shortly after release.

"We have free speech," Smyth told the court at the trial's opening a week ago. "You can say Christ was a fraud or a deceiver or Christ may have been a homosexual, provided you say it in a reasonable, measured, reflective, decent way."

POEM DEFENDED

The defence, led by playwright-barrister John Mortimer, contended the poem by Oxford Prof.

E.H. Treffy, commanding officer of the Prince Rupert division of the RC P made the presentation on behalf of the provincial secretary.

pipeline developed a crack, apparently because of contact with cold liquid nitrogen instead of warmed-up nitrogen gas.

The oil was stopped, 15 miles short of Pump Station No. 8, for 2½ days while the damaged section of pipeline was replaced.

Last Thursday morning, the oil started flowing again, passing through Pump Station No. 8, and filling the four-foot diameter pipeline for another 30 miles south.

Last Friday oil pressure in the line dropped suddenly. The oil flow was stopped and when a crew started to check a huge filter to see if it was clogged, crude oil and vapors poured under pressure into the pump room and exploded as the workmen dashed for safety.

Alaska said the damage was more than $15 million.

Toll 19 in French flood

RICH, France (Reuters) — The death toll mounted to 19 Monday in the worst flooding to hit southwestern France this century and the government dispatched a senior minister to co-ordinate relief operations.

Weekend flooding, following days of torrential rain, destroyed up to 90 per cent of the region's cereal and tobacco crops, decimated livestock and caused millions of dollars worth of property damage.

The Meteorological Office forecast further storms for the southwest.

Prime Minister Raymond

Barre announced that one million francs ($200,000) would be made available for immediate aid.

President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing ordered Interior Minister Christian Bonnet to tour devastated areas in the Haute Garonne, Gers and Lot and Garonne departments (districts) to co-ordinate relief work.

This city of 25,000, capital of the Gers district, was cut in two by a muddy torrent when the Gers River rose nearly 10 feet in half an hour.

More than 5,000 people were made homeless when the lower part of the town was submerged by flood waters, which carried away two bridges, undermined the foundations of buildings and smashed cars.

The bodies of six victims had been found and at least two other people were known to have drowned.

Elsewhere, five campers perished at a holiday camp in the Haute Garonne area. Six people died in the Lot and Garonne area, including a young soldier killed in a road accident while on a rescue mission.

Recording our past on tape

Herald Staff Writer

Twenty-five years of Portuguese and French experiences in the Terrace area will be preserved under an aural history project being carried out this summer.

Students Rita Peters, Marg Vanderberg, and Mani Singh, all of Terrace, will be interviewing individuals for the project, funded by Young Canada Works, sponsored by the library, and co-ordinated by the provincial archives branch.

This history of Terrace is placing special emphasis on the Portuguese and French communities during the years 1930 to 1955, Rita Peters told the Herald.

Topic areas will cover the post-war years, World War II, logging, railroad construction, and mining, she explained.

Peters said that these years were chosen because the archives branch believes it already has enough stored material about local pioneers.

"But if any pioneers feel they have a real neat story that hasn't been taped before, we'd sure be glad to have it," she said.

The goal of the project is to record and compile a collection of tapes that would provide "a unique insight into the social and cultural life of these people, dwelling on stories and experiences of human interest rather than a dry collection of historical data."

The three researchers hope that local people with recollections from this time period will come forward for interviews. Prospective storytellers will be questioned informally, at first, to establish the areas for further investigation and interrogation.

The finished tapes will be available at the Terrace library and permanent copies will be retained at the provincial archives.

Anyone who has a particular story should contact the Aural History Project at 5-2063 or at their office in the library basement.

ANDREW IN YELLOWKNIFE

Lunch steak with a prince

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — Five young northern women enjoyed their first barbecue date with Prince Andrew Sunday and their verdict was that he cooked a mean steak.

The women were part of a group of officials and young northerners who accompanied the 17-year-old prince for an afternoon's boating on the choppy waters of Great Slave Lake.

The prince, dressed in blue jeans and checked shirt, clearly made the most of his five-hour outing.

He tended the steaks for the barbecue on Ace Island, chatted freely, snapped photographs and piloted one of the two boats, the 26-foot Umiak, back to port Sunday evening.

A highlight of the royal visit was a brief stop at the Dagrib Indian settlement of Detah, four miles by water across from the territorial capital.

As the prince's boat, the 36-foot Nauti-Gal III, owned and skippered by Yellowknife Mayor Fred Henne, approached the village dock, a locust-like swarm of Indian children rushed out to greet him.

TACKS TO CHIEF

With Northwest Territories Commissioner Stuart Hodgson at his side, Prince Andrew talked through Dogrib interpreter Peter Liske to former Yellowknife band chief Joe Sangri and present Chief Joe Charlo.

Hodgson later explained that Chief Sangri had asked the prince for a new home—his third request to visiting royalty in a decade.

In 1967 Chief Sangri begged Princess Alexandra to give his village a road—and it got one.

During the Queen's visit in 1970, the chief requested electricity for the community—which duly received it.

Prince Andrew arrived here from Edmonton Sunday. Later today he travels to Resolute Bay, 1,570 air miles northeast of Edmonton.

He'll also visit Grise Fiord, Canada's most northerly Inuit community.

Constitution Act authorized expenses for boards and commissions but it was his policy that the government not pay the expenses of MLAs to discourage using MLAs unnecessarily for government tasks to supplement their incomes. MLAs WEREN'T BILLED

He noted his office failed to bill the MLAs for their expenses.

"You can appreciate my dismay to find that the spirit of this intent had not only failed to be carried out, but that I was responsible for that failure," he said in accepting "full blame and responsibility."

"I apologize to them for any embarrassment the incident may have caused. No blame should be attached to any MLA. The fact that their expenses should not be paid was a political decision."

Curtis told Progressive

Conservative leader Scott Wallace he had two or three options where to find funds to pay the expenses, including a Social Credit caucus fund or telling them there would be no assistance.

Outside the legislature, Bawlf and Kerster indicated they were considering billing the government for their out-of-pocket expenses incurred while working on the committee.

GIBSON CHARGES VRB being closed before bill passed

VICTORIA (CP) — The Vancouver Resources Board is being dismantled by the Social Credit government, before legislation incorporating the board into the ministry of human resources has been passed by the British Columbia legislature, Liberal leader Gordon Gibson charged Monday.

Gibson told the house that the government has made several moves in anticipation of the passage of the legislation, and as such, his privileges as an MLA are being breached.

He said the government is in clear contempt of the legislature. Gibson asked Speaker Ed Smith to rule on the matter and said he would like to see it sent to committee for further investigation. Smith reserved decision.

Gibson said VRB officials received a letter Monday from John Noble, deputy minister of human resources, advising that the government was placing spending restrictions on the board.

"That letter advised the resources board that henceforth certain restrictions would be put on their activities, pending passage of the bill, such as specific approval of the deputy minister being required for payments of $5,000 or over, any matters requiring approval of the board, and legal services," said Gibson.

TAKES FOR GRANTED

"It is my opinion that this action by the deputy minister takes passage of Bill 65 by the legislature for granted, and therefore is a contempt of the legislature, either by the deputy, or by the minister, if the deputy was acting under instruction."

Gibson also said that a public works official was measuring space in the VRB offices last week "under the assumption of a provincial take-over."

He said the official was acting under a memorandum of instruction and that "the ultimate author of that memorandum is, in my opinion, in contempt of the legislature ..."

The Liberal leader stated as well that two human resources officials examined the VRB file system last week in preparation for integration.

The bill to dismantle the board was introduced on June 22 and has not received any debate.

"The contempt is compounded by the fact that the government has the management of the business of the house, and were these urgent steps required, could easily have called the legislation for debate at any time after June 22," Gibson said.

The VRB was first set up by the former NDP government and the final such community board remaining in B.C., the rest having been phased out by the present government.

Advertising bucks buying off media?

WINNIPEG (CP) — The $37 million in advertising placed by breweries and distilleries in 1975 may be one reason why the news media focus on illicit drugs instead of legal drugs such as alcohol which cause more problems, says the director of a Saskatchewan alcohol abuse program.

"A recent survey in a small town in Saskatchewan discovered that the No. 1 drug problem perceived by the community was heroin," Dick Shattuck, director of the Aware program, told 200 delegates at an addictions conference Monday.

"I doubt there has ever been a heroin addict in that particular town."

Shattuck said the massive advertising budget of the alcohol industry may influence news media reporting of alcohol-related problems.

"Since its primary purpose is to generate revenue, the social responsibility of the media to substance use and abuse can be seen as somewhat suspect."

He said he was disturbed by the way newspapers, magazines, radio and television present alcohol problems.

"Alcoholism touches all segments of society, yet the media frequently associate addiction or dependency with crime, poverty and specific racial minorities," he said.

USE STEREOTYPE

"All alcoholics began their drinking habits in the same manner we all did. Yet the media continue to support the stereotype that the alcoholic is someone very different from a social drinker."

Shattuck said the media may actually help spread some drug abuses.

He recommended that the Canadian Foundation on Alcohol and Drug Dependencies (CFADD) work towards improving relations between experts in the addictions field and reporters.

7 charged with impeding inquiry

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jack Nichol, president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, and past president Homer Stevens are among seven persons charged under the Combines Investigation Act with impeding an inquiry.

The action Monday is the latest episode in a combines investigation that led to a search in January of newsrooms at the Sun and Province and of two television stations. During those searches film and reporters' notebooks and contact sheets were seized under a warrant issued by a justice of the peace.

A British Columbia Supreme Court judgment June 28 ruled that the issuing of the warrant to Combines Act investigators was an abuse of the processes of the courts.

In an information filed in provincial court Monday, investigator Simon Wapnarski of Ottawa alleges that Stevens, Nichol, George Hewison, Bert Ogden, Walter Tickson, David McIntosh and Kenneth Robinson "between Dec. 5 and 9, 1976, in Vancouver, did unlawfully impede an inquiry under the Combines Investigation Act."

The charges arose when officers of the union demanded that the inquiry into union operations which began last Dec. 6 be made public.

When combines department personnel refused and held the hearing in camera, the union allegedly refused to attend.

Pesticide bill called 'restrictive legislation'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Newly introduced pesticide legislation will make it more difficult and expensive for the public to oppose government spraying programs, a Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society spokesman said Sunday.

Merriam Doucet, chairman of SPEC's pesticide committee, said Bill 46, the Pesticide Control Act, "is just another piece of restrictive legislation, another barrier for the public, and an expensive one."

The legislation, introduced Friday by Environment Minister Jim Neilsen, would establish a board to hear appeals on the use of pesticides by the private sector and government agencies such as British Columbia Hydro. The board's decision would be final and binding.

The legislation also provides for violation fines of up to $2,000 or up to six months in prison, or both, for selling without a permit pesticides restricted under the act. The fine now is $500.

She said the legislation will force the public into hiring expensive lawyers to protest government programs.

She said she was disappointed the legislation doesn't ensure the impartiality of the board's chairman and that board members will all be civil servants from government departments that are major users of chemicals.

"They're going to sit in judgment on their own programs," she said. "They'll steamroll any opposition."

She said at least one of the board members should be a public representative.

"I feel that what they're doing is cementing the go-ahead for these spraying programs."

Erik Wood, financial secretary of the International Woodworkers of America, Local 1-387 said the legislation is probably just a smokescreen behind which the government will conduct its spraying program next year.

"This just gives it an air of legitimacy," he said. "It's a rubber stamp."

Smoker caused $1000,000 blaze

TRAIL, B.C. (CP) — A careless smoker started the fire that caused $100,000 damage to the Terra Nova Hotel in this southeastern British Columbia community Saturday, a Trail fire department spokesman said Monday.

The spokesman said a guest fell asleep in his second-floor room and a smouldering cigarette started the fire that burned upward through the third and fourth stories of the building.

No one was injured, and facilities on the hotel's main floor were open Monday.

Nuclear shipments may resume

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian and German leaders discussed Monday the possibility of an interim resumption of nuclear shipments to Germany while awaiting the solution of safeguard problems,

Canadian officials said.

They said Prime Minister Trudeau and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt discussed a number of ways under which uranium shipments, suspended since Jan. 1, might be resumed.

An official of the prime minister's office, briefing reporters after the second round of formal talks between Trudeau and the visiting chancellor, said talks were designed to improve the understanding of each other's nuclear position.

He said officials were to continue the talks Monday night to make sure there was clear understanding.

The subject of nuclear shipments was one of the major topics raised by Trudeau and Schmidt in almost two hours of talks following the chancellor's arrival from Duluth, Minn., where he had visited a cousin.

DISCUSSED RIGHTS

Trudeau and Schmidt talked of human rights and other matters in Vancouver last week during the western end of a seven-day Canadian visit.

Today Schmidt will meet several ministers to discuss such things as trade and then hold a news conference. From there he goes to Toronto to meet provincial officials and on Wednesday he flies to Washington.

The leaders also talked of NATO, the world economy, and domestic economic considerations such as inflation and unemployment.

But the main attention was focused on finding ways under which Canada can reach a nuclear safeguards agreement with Euratom, the nuclear agency of the European Economic Community (EEC), so it can resume uranium sales to Europe, primarily to West Germany and Britain.

Canada suspended sales because of lack of agreement on a number of issues with EEC. A major one is Germany's insistence on reprocessing nuclear fuel—something Canada has disagreed with in the past—and Canada's insistence on complete control of nuclear supplies as long as they are used.

Canadian officials said

to modernize existing arrangements and to sign new treaties.

Under the new treaty, extradition would be possible on offences related to aerial hijacking and drugs, also for conspiracy to commit or being party to any offence listed as extraditable in the treaty.

The treaty says it is not possible to refuse extradition for political reasons for crimes against "internationally-protected persons"—ambassadors and others protected under international treaties.

Canadian officials said the talk dealt in part with the International Nuclear Fuel Cycle Evaluation Program (INFCEP) launched at the May western summit meeting.

The program will seek to determine whether reprocessing nuclear material is worth while, among other things.

Trudeau's office said that if Canada can be shown that the study is not a superficial one it might be possible to resume shipments on an interim basis.

Compulsory retirement wasteful, unfair

Compulsory retirement at age 65 is both unfair and wasteful.

For employers, the result is a loss of valuable human skills and reservoirs of experience. Also lost are such priceless by-products of longer life as wisdom and the ability to cope with the whole gamut of practical situations.

It should not be assumed, of course, that everyone reaching the age of 65 wants to go on working. Others may not be capable of doing an effective job.

What, then, are the alternatives to total retirement?

Those who have researched this problem are convinced that it can often be solved by redistributing responsibilities to provide enough work for all age groups. In many cases this may call for senior employees to step down or sideways to new positions. Alternatively they may be assigned to part-time work or serve as consultants. Thousands of people slated to be axed from their jobs at the prevailing age limit would gladly settle for lower pay.

However, if there's no way a person can be retained by his present employer all is not lost. Many gray-haired ex-employees have turned to a second career in a similar or totally different field that might be less demanding. Yet this road, too, can be rough. So far, few firms are willing to give even part-time work to a recent retiree.

Because senior workers so obviously deserve fairer treatment, it is to be hoped that the federal government's new Human Rights Act (Bill C-25) will include prohibition of age discrimination.

Certainly the future will force a change. Statisticians forecast a sharp rise in the number of senior citizens in Canada over the next 20 years. Thus the national work load will have to be spread over a wider age span. It's not too soon to stop making all 65 year olds walk the plank by offering them more enlightened and practical alternatives.

Interpreting the news

Kennan decries Carter's philosophy

WASHINGTON (CP) — A former U.S. career diplomat has struck a tough philosophical blow at the foundation of Jimmy Carter's foreign policy, challenging the idea that the United States should be an aggressive champion of freedom of dissent.

In a new book, The Cloud of Danger: Current Realities of American Foreign Policy, George Kennan says he sees little hope of success "in an American policy which sets out to correct and improve the political habits of large parts of the world's population."

"Misgovernment, in the sense of the rise to power of the most determined, decisive and often brutal natures, has been the common condition of most of mankind for centuries and millennia in the past. "It is going to remain that condition for long into the future, no matter how valiantly Americans insist on tilting against the windmills."

Kennan, who once was U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, will by all accounts find much agreement for his views among state department professionals who for months have been grumbling about Carter's moralistic statements and willingness to antagonize foreign governments on human rights issues.

But his objections go far beyond a diplomat's nervousness about strained relations; Kennan is implicitly challenging the view that democracy should be the universal ideal.

DEMOCRACY UNNATURAL?

"I know of no evidence that 'democracy,' or what we picture to ourselves under that word, is the natural state of most of mankind," Kennan writes.

"... Democracy has, in other words, a relatively narrow base both in time and in space; and the evidence has yet to be produced that it is the natural form of rule for peoples outside those narrow perimeters."

The United States, he says, should concentrate on areas of international affairs where the dangers and opportunities for effective U.S. action are greatest and "these, as it happens, are ones that have little relation to the cause of democracy as such."

The difficulty for Kennan and his supporters is that they oppose more than just a hardnosed president who has firm views on the role of morality.

What they are fighting is two centuries of American tradition, a tradition that began when a minority of colonists rejected conventional military and economic wisdom and put their faith in an ideal.

FORCE REMAINS

The ideal has been frequently tarnished—by the slaughter of Indians, periodic blatant corruption and occasional questionable wars—but it remains as a pervasive force in U.S. society.

Carter's political strength lies largely in the fact that he can tap this force, expressing the country's philosophic commitment to liberty and promising a return to the days when Americans could feel clear moral supremacy.

Nor has Carter been wholly ineffective in his six months of experiment and innovation.

A British observer, writing in The Guardian, concluded: "If his human rights crusade has had its logical hiatuses, it has also—already—helped set free a lot of people, in Latin America, Asia and even Iran, who would otherwise still be behind bars."

Members of Congress, ever alert to the direction of political winds, have been quick to give verbal support to international human rights, pressing proposals that go even further than Carter wants to go at the moment.

Congressmen, perhaps unlike some former diplomats, know there are not votes to be won in treating the American democracy as yet another historical accident.

An MLA's report

NDP repetitive in its speeches

By CYRIL M. SHELFORD
mla, skeena

Strachan or Arnold Webster.

This week was Highway's week with most Members in the Legislature taking part in the discussion describing their roads, and the problems involved which makes it an interesting discussion for all.

The only disappointing thing that is happening on the discussion of all Departments, is the increasing repetition by Members of the Opposition; where several members have used their full time of thirty minutes three times, which certainly is a definite abuse of free debate and will destroy the process of democracy if continued as it will bring to a stand-still the operation of Government.

It has always been my opinion the Government is elected to govern and the opposition to oppose and offer alternative programs. Not to resort to personal attacks or long speeches to delay, but by hard hitting speeches as seen in the days of Harold Winch, Bob

The Legislature has already sat nearly four months with still a long time to go. No one likes a limit on debate but the present delay tactics cannot go on, as all MLA's regardless of party should be out in their ridings meeting with people and getting new ideas.

With lengthy sessions very few new ideas come out after the first two months - the rest of the time is spent repeating something that was said the day before, the week before, or the month before.

There is no question in my experience in the Legislature for twenty-two years the higher level of education has made it possible for the present members to speak longer, to say less, and its time a committee of all parties be set up to sit down and lay out new rules which are 50 years out of date and to resolve a very unsatisfactory situation which has developed since 1972.

In fairness, not all the blame can be placed on the present opposition.

Yesterday I asked again for the completion of the road to the North which is an important link for the future marine and road transportation link from the supply centres of Vancouver and the Western U.S. to the North and Alaska.

I also asked for a road link from Hazelton to the recreational area of Swan Lake and on to the Nass road, also the completion of the road from Smithers to Granisle to give our tourists and people of Granisle a second route from Babine Lake. I requested a day labour program for sections of the Kitwanga-Nass highway so that we can compare costs with that of contracts. The Minister replied they were spending over 20 million on Highway 37, and liked my idea of a section under day labour. He also said the Department would be moving on the Hazelton-Nass link and the Smithers-Granisle road.

My main concern with highway construction and maintenance is the terrific increase in costs to the tax payer since 1972, mainly due to the stupid contract signed between the former Government and the Government Employees Union - especially the clause of portal to portal pay which can mean in remote areas only three hours work, which is very costly and inefficient manner to serve the tax payer. To get three hours work for an expensive Cat or Grader is simply not good enough and this contract alone will cost the tax payer millions and even billions during the years ahead.

We all like to see our workers paid well, but society can't afford to buy expensive machines to work three hours a day. If this clause spreads to the Resource Industries none of them will be competitive with foreign countries for the world market.

Arafat's image is tarnished

BEIRUT (AP) — The Kuwait hijacking and other recent Palestinian terror attacks contrast with Yasser Arafat's efforts to project a "good guy" image of his Palestine Liberation Organization and his claims of a unified Palestinian movement.

The contrasts were highlighted by Arafat's denial of PLO participation in the hijacking, which ended with the surrender of the hijackers in Damascus on Sunday, and his support of the Petah Tiqvah bombing in Israel last week.

In addition, there has been a little-noticed outbreak of kidnapping, bomb attacks and reprisals in the last two months that has, in some cases, sparked major clashes between rival guerrilla organizations.

The "unsanctioned" terror attacks and the intra-Palestinian fighting pose a new challenge to Arafat's efforts to establish full control over the faction-ridden and turbulent Palestinian movement.

The 47-year-old guerrilla chieftain has proved himself an adept political infighter, quelling four armed mutinies and surviving two assassination attempts since he was elected chairman of the PLO in 1967, replacing the diplomat-founder Ahmed Shukairi.

MANY SPLINTERS There is no accurate estimate of how many splinter groups there are in the Palestinian movement, but about a dozen major groups have formed under the umbrella of the PLO.

Ever since Arafat appeared before the UN General Assembly carrying a pistol and urging peace in November 1974, the PLO has tried to appear as a true liberation movement rather than a combination of terrorist bands.

Arafat's mainstream guerrillas have condemned acts of terror outside of Israel and directed against non-Israeli targets.

For example, PLO condemned Friday's hijack of a Kuwaiti jet as an attempt to drive a wedge between Syria and the guerrilla movement. But Arafat's Al Fatah and three other factions claimed responsibility for a pipe bomb that killed one person and injured 20 in Petah Tiqvah on Wednesday.

Anti-Arafat coup attempts were staged by chiefs of staff of the Palestine Liberation Army (PLA), the military arm of the guerrilla movement. The 8,000-man PLA has long complained Arafat favored irregular guerrillas with money and arms.

POSES A CHALLENGE

The latest challenge to Arafat came from Brig. Musbah Budeiry, a PLA chief of staff he ousted in June 1976 during the height of the guerrillas' confrontation with Syrian forces who intervened to end Lebanon's civil war. Budeiry, based in Damascus where most of the PLA troops are stationed, called publicly two weeks ago for the overthrow of Arafat.

Budeiry's predecessor as PLA chief, Col. Osman Haddad, failed in attempts to overthrow Arafat in the 1960s. He has since retired but still commands a large following among PLA troops.

Arafat has patched up his wartime dispute with Syrian President Hafez Assad, but Assad retains control over the pro-Syrian Saiga guerrillas led by Zuhair Mohsen, head of the PLO's military department.

Iraqi-based guerrillas led by Sabri Banna, known by the code name Abu Nidal, are another major challenge to Arafat's leadership although Nidal has no real power base in Lebanon's refugee camps.

His group, known as the Black June, claimed responsibility for last year's siege of the Semiramis Hotel in Damascus and a later attack on the international Hotel in Amman. They also claimed responsibility for an attempt early this year to assassinate Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam.

50th ANNIVERSARY

Bennett thanks his wife for helping him succeed

KELOWNA, B.C. (CP) — Former premier W.A.C. Bennett says that without his wife he could not have built up his chain of hardware stores or become a successful politician.

Bennett, 76, who was premier of British Columbia for 20 years until his Social Credit party government was defeated by the New Democratic Party in August, 1972, celebrated Sunday his 50th wedding anniversary to the former May Richards.

Shortly after his government's defeat, Bennett resigned his Okanagan South seat, where he was first elected to the legislature in 1941. His son, Bill Bennett, was elected in a byelection, and in December, 1975, led the Social Credit party back into government.

The former premier said in an interview Saturday that marriage is the most important thing a person does in his life.

NO REGRETS

"We have had a really good marriage and have no regrets," he said.

Bennett first met his wife at a Young Persons Movement meeting in Edmonton in 1924.

"It wasn't love at first sight but there was recognition," he said. "After the first six months I knew May was the woman who was to be my wife."

They were married in 1927 and three years later they moved to this Okanagan Valley city where Bennett opened a hardware store.

"I had left the wife and children, Russell and Anita, in Victoria staying with relatives. I drove through the area and the roads were bad and dusty. I went to the lake and had a swim and wondered why I hadn't come to Kelowna earlier."

Bennett promptly bought a hardware store in Kelowna, the first of several.

The former premier had some advice on marriage for young persons.

WAIT TO MARRY He said the main thing is that they get married between the ages of 24 and 27.

"That's not too young or too old and people know enough about life then to make their marriage a success."

"Another thing that would help would be a lack of major differences. If there are too many of these, it leads to a loss of confidence and jealousy."

Bennett said he is not alarmed at today's permissive society.

"You will always get periods in history going way back just like this one. It's like a pendulum. A swing in one direction and back again. I don't think human nature has changed in thousands of years. There are a lot of good, happy young married people about these days like there always are and always will be."

Bennett's son Russell (R.J.) is currently head of the Bennett interests. His daughter, Anita Tozer, is his personal secretary.

Reward offered for stolen horse

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A $25,000 reward has been offered jointly by Claiborne Farm in Paris, Ky. and Canadian horseman Jean-Louis Levesque of Montreal in the latest effort to recover Levesque's stolen mare, Fanfreluche.

The 10-year-old mare, a former Canadian Horse of the Year, was in foal to 1973 Triple Crown winner Secretariat for two months at the time she disappeared June 25 from a remote pasture at sprawling Claiborne Farm.

Claiborne Farm owner Seth Hancock and Levesque are each putting up half of the reward money, which is "offered to the person or persons furnishing information leading to the apprehension and conviction of the person or persons responsible for stealing the thoroughbred mare Fanfreluche," Claiborne spokesman Jim Friess said Monday.

The mare's markings include a small star on her forehead, white socks on the hind ankles and black spots on each coronet, Friess said. Friess also said the mare's lip tattoo number is W12997, but appears to be W12991.

He said that anyone with information should contact Claiborne Farm, Kentucky State Police or the FBI.

Fanfreluche, sired by 1964 Kentucky Derby winner Northern Dancer, won 11 races and earned $238,688 during her career. Her most notable offspring to date was L'Enjoleur.

After the theft, Hancock said that Fanfreluche has a tendency to abort when in foal, and requires a special hormone treatment. She last received such a treatment June 22 and was due for another treatment about July 16, said Dr. Walter Kaufman, the veterinarian who had been treating the mare.

The FBI and state police launched an investigation into the theft, but reported no significant findings.

Friess said that Hancock and Levesque decided to put up the reward after the investigation failed to yield any leads.

Future prospect

The weather hasn't been the best for football lately but when the sun peeks out from behind the clouds fellows like Scott are ready for action. Scott is one of many youngsters involved in the summer playground at Caledonia this week. Anyone wishing to participate should visit the school this week in the morning and get involved. When the weather isn't so good the gym provides the activity area.

Racers run out of time

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The penniless Indianapolis Racers, locked in an eleventh-hour struggle to come up with the needed financial commitment, were turned down by a potential investor and will not make application for admission to the National Hockey League, it was announced Monday.

"We had an interested investor," said David Givens, general counsel for Indiana National Bank, creditor of the team's assets. "We talked with him this morning and he advised us he was not interested in further discussion. The one serious inquiry has seemed to disappear."

The Racers, members of the World Hockey Association for three years, needed about $8.3 million dollars to clean up all debts and make entry payments to the NHL, which has invited at least six WHA teams for the 1977-78 season.

"It appears there will be no application (by the Racers) for an NHL franchise," Givens told a news conference at the bank. "I want to emphasize the word 'appears' because lightning does strike every now and then. But there is now no one on the horizon."

Brian Conacher, general manager of the Racers, was out of town and could not be reached for comment. A spokesman in his office said the bank's announcement means the team is "probably gone."

"We have 48 hours (until the deadline imposed by the NHL for application)," the spokesman said. "It doesn't look good, and there probably won't be a Racers hockey team."

Givens identified the interested investor as William Calachan, a Bettendorf, Iowa, banker. DISCLOSES PROBLEMS "We talked with him on several occasions. We made a full disclosure of the financial problems. He was here last week, and we have to believe he was very serious."

"But he is a businessman, and the dollars were very large."

Callaghan, in a telephone interview with Indianapolis News from his bank, said "I've been over the figures enough to know there is no way to work it out. I don't want to throw cold water on any other possible investors, because Indianapolis is a super place and everybody I talked to talked hockey."

"But under the conditions outlined to me there would be such a big loss every year you would have to be getting into it just for the love of hockey and have unlimited funds."

Quarterbacks are on parade tonight

THE CANADIAN PRESS All eyes will be on the quarterbacks tonight when the regular-season schedule in the Western Football Conference begins with shootouts at Vancouver and Winnipeg.

Winnipeg Stadium fans will be watching to find out whether Ralph Brock of the Bombers deserves to be starting ahead of Blue Bomber team-mate Harry Knight. They also will be anxious to find out if veteran Ron Lancaster still has some of that old black magic left for Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Empire Stadium in Vancouver will be the scene of a matchup of former National Football League quarterbacks—Jerry Tagge of British Columbia Lions and John Hufnagel of Calgary Stampeders.

The Blue Bombers are heavy pre-season favorites in the WFC after winning all four exhibition games. The rifle-armed Brock has shown he can throw or scramble, depending on the situation, while Knight has been cool under fire in his impressive relief roles.

Coach Bud Riley of the Bombers calls his team the best in the country right now, an opinion shared by many of his colleagues.

GETTING ALONG "This is as good a team as I've had anywhere," says Riley, who has been a pro head coach only in Winnipeg. "It's just unreal how well they got along together."

"You can't force that feeling on ball players, but when they have it, the job of coaching becomes a whole lot easier."

Riley is the only head man in the WFC to retain his job since the 1976 season. Jim Eddy of the Roughriders, like Riley a former Saskatchewan assistant, has stuck his neck out by predicting his team will beat the Bombers.

"I am sure we will win because I know the team I have put together will respond to the challenge of playing Winnipeg and will be ready," says Eddy, knowing that Lancaster is his ace in the hole.

Lancaster didn't play much in the exhibition season as the Roughriders lost all four of their games, but he has that valuable experience and now is an assistant coach as well.

WILLIAMS BACK

Saskatchewan has only one holdover in its defensive backfield, with imports Steve Dennis, Phil Price and Lewis Cook along with Canadian Randy Graham stepping in for the departed or injured players. "Paul Williams is back again, however, and is also valuable on kick returns."

John Hufnagel will be Calgary's quarterback as Jack Gotta makes his official return to the coaching profession in the Canadian Football League with the Stampeders.

Hufnagel, once with Denver Broncos of the NFL, joined the Stampeders near the end of last season and showed enough promise to get another chance under Gotta, who left Ottawa of the Eastern Football Conference following the 1973 season after the Rough Riders won the Grey Cup.

Gotta, who coached Birmingham Barons to the World Football League championship in 1974, lost some of the speed from his offense Sunday when import wide receiver Willie Armstead suffered a broken bone in his right foot when he tripped during practice.

Larry Leatham, a Canadian rookie from the University of Calgary, will start against B.C. in place of Armstead as the Stampeders attempt to gain a playoff berth for the first time since they won the Grey Cup in 1971.

PLAYED FOR STARR

Jerry Tagge, who played for coach Bart Starr at Green Bay in the NFL, will be the Lions' starting quarterback—providing he recovers in time from a rib injury suffered July 1 at Edmonton.

Whitecaps defeat Hawaii

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Whitecaps scored two late goals and then hung on for a 4-3 North American Soccer League victory over Team Hawaii before 12,473 fans Monday night.

Both teams played loose, wide-open soccer in the closing stages as five goals were scored in the final 13 minutes.

The win moved the Whitecaps to within five points of Minnesota Kicks.

He's the all-star of all time

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Garvey, the slugging first baseman of Los Angeles Dodgers, became the first player to receive more than four million votes in balloting for the National League baseball all-star team, announced Monday by baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Garvey, winner of the most valuable-player award in the 1974 all-star game, was selected as a starter for the fourth consecutive year. He received 4,277,735 votes in the fan balloting, breaking the record of 3-497,358 set in 1974 by outfielder Reggie Jackson, then with Oakland A's.

Chosen with Garvey to the starting team were second baseman Joe Morgan, shortstop Dave Concepcion, outfielder George Foster and catcher Johnny Bench, all of Cincinnati Reds, third baseman Ron Cey of Los Angeles, and outfielders Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia Phillies and Dave Parker of Pittsburgh Pirates.

A record 12,562,476 ballots were tabulated, more than four million above the previous mark of 8,370,145 set last year.

ANNOUNCE STARTERS

The American League starters will be announced today, and the reserves and pitchers for both clubs will be named later in the week by the managers—Sparky Anderson of Cincinnati and Billy Martin of New York Yankees.

The 48th all-star game will be played July 19th at New York's Yankee Stadium.

In addition to Garvey, four National League players received more than three million votes.

Morgan was runner-up with 3,309,754 votes. Bench, the only player to be chosen as a starter in each of the eight years of fan balloting, had 3,262,680 votes.

Cey recaptured the third base spot he lost to Cincinnati's Pete Rose last year, receiving 3,102,186 votes, and Concepcion got 3,098,750 votes.

Luzinski, an all-star reserve in 1975 and a starter last year, led the outfielders with 2,157,722 votes. Parker collected 2,286,714 votes, and Foster 2,161,668 votes.

'Intent to maim' Steelers claim

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pittsburgh Steeler coach Chuck Noll has stuck George Atkinson of Oakland Raiders with a label that will follow him the rest of his life, a federal court jury was told Monday.

In opening arguments at Atkinson's $2 million slander suit against Noll and the Steelers, attorney Willie Brown said Noll was wrong to say that Atkinson was part of a criminal element in professional football and lacked Steeler Lynn Swann with an intent to maim.

"George Atkinson will indicate to you that he is not angel and no saint, but also that he is not a criminal element out to maim. He is hurt and embarrassed by Mr. Noll's statement almost on a daily basis."

"The clarity of what occurred is equalled only by its ferocity," responded Steeler attorney James Martin MacInnis. "It was intentional."

The suit stems from an incident in a September, 1976, National Football League game in which Swann was injured when hit by Atkinson. A five-woman, one-man civil jury was seated before U.S. District Judge Samuel Conti to hear the case, expected to take two to three weeks.

Two days after Swann was injured, Noll told newsmen in Pittsburgh:

"You have a criminal element in every society and apparently we have it in the NFL, too. George Atkinson's hit on Lynn Swann was with intent to maim and not with football in mind. I'd like to see those guys thrown out of the league. They put a guy's whole career in jeopardy."

Also at issue in the trial is a $1 million counterclaim filed by the Steelers for Swann's injuries inflicted by Atkinson, a nine-year veteran defensive back.

Dog 'n' Suds wins Hazelton tourney

Terrace Dog 'n' Suds came through the the big game when it counted in the South Hazelton Invitational Ladies Fastball Tournament last weekend.

Saturday morning Dog 'n' Suds met with K'San Maids of Hazelton and defeated them 8-4. Terrace easily overcame Klitmat Aces in their second game that afternoon with the score at 15-3 after 5 innings.

The next morning, Terrace came up against the Kispixox Warriettes. They took an early lead and went on to defeat Kispixox 9-5, thus advancing into the finals scheduled for later in the afternoon. Kispixox came in through the back door to again meet up with the Dog 'n' Suds.

In the final game, Terrace unleashed their batting power and poured 18 runs over the plate to the Warriettes 1. This meant Dog 'n' Suds clinched first place undefeated and were awarded the tournament trophy.

In addition, Sue Mullavey received a trophy for "Best Infielder", and for the second week in a row, Gene McKeand received a trophy as "Best Pitcher".

Angels bounce Sherry

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — California Angels fired manager Norm Sherry on Monday and hired third base coach Dave Garcia to replace him, a spokesman for the American League baseball team said.

The Angels also hired Frank Robinson, fired last month as Cleveland Indians manager, as batting coach.

Pitching coach Billy Muffett also was fired with former catcher Andy Etchebarren taking over in the pitching department, at least temporarily, club officials said.

The Angels, in third place in the American League West and 9½ games behind Chicago White Sox, have lost five consecutive games. Sherry was hired last July 23 to succeed Dick Williams as manager and was successful in the last half of the season.

The pressure on him mounted when owner Gene Autry paid an estimated $4.5 million to acquire free agents Bobby Grich, Joe Rudi and Don Baylor to bolster the offensive attack. All three have been hurt at times this season and Grich probably is out for the season.

Garcia, 56, who was on Robinson's staff at Cleveland, becomes the seventh Angel manager since the club joined the majors in 1961.

Garcia's contract extends through 1978.

Executive vice-president Harry Dalton of the Angels said "We feel our team is definitely a contending club and has the capability to move into the middle of the pennant race this second half of the season."

"We felt that these changes would help us accomplish this," Garcia had served as third base coach under Sherry, who directed the club to a 39-42 record this season, when its executives counted on title contention.

The Angels have never won a pennant or division title.

grounded out, scored on a suicide squeeze by Gary Carter.

Rookie Eddie Murray singled over the drawn-in New York outfield to score Al Bumbry with the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning Monday night as Baltimore Orioles edged the Yankees 4-3 in an American League baseball game.

The Baltimore rally negated two solo home runs by New York's Graig Nettles, his 19th and 20th of the season.

Bumbry led off the ninth with a triple that bounced past New York left fielder Roy White who he failed to make an attempted shoestring catch.

The victory kept Baltimore one-half game behind Boston in the American League East race and dropped the Yankees to third place, 1½ games behind the Red Sox.

Boston retained its lead when rookie Bob Stanley fired a fivehitter as the Red Sox nipped Cleveland Indians 2-1. George Scott singled home the deciding run in the fourth inning. Cleveland's lone run came in the fifth on Andre Thornton's 11th home run of the season.

Rusty Staub drove on four runs with a home run and double and scored what turned out to be the winning run as Detroit Tigers downed Toronto Blue Jays 9-7. Toronto had jumped out to a 5-0 lead before Staub led the Detroit comeback.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 20) ♈
Not too much planetary help, but an alert person like yourself can always manipulate an "off" day into one that's both interesting and satisfying—often in an unexpected manner.
TAURUS (Apr. 21 to May 21) ♉
This is a time to review—to find missing links, details hidden to the casual eye, to change a course which is obviously leading to a dead end. Use accumulated knowledge.
GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) ♊
Your innate self-reliance and your ability to come back stronger after meeting and beating challenges will serve you well now. Think and judge with tolerance.
CANCER (June 22 to July 23) ♋
Lunar influences stimulate your ambitions and incentives. This is no time for worry or doubt. You can accomplish a great deal if making the best use of your talents.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 23) ♏
Consider all propositions and suggestions offered, but do not be inveigled into anything that's not "your cup of tea." Fine influences stimulate your ambitions.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21) ♐
Do not jeopardize a dandy opportunity to stabilize your REAL interests now and DO bypass nonessentials. Have a try at an eye-catching new method.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) ♑
Considering this day's fine stellar influences, you should easily be able to produce top-notch results, increase assets, reanimate ambitions.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) ♒
Under day's favorable aspects, you can win new laurels by capitalizing on your fine imagination and by pooling ideas with those who share your enthusiasms.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) ♓
Avoid restlessness, regrets over past errors, apprehension. These could all interfere with your progress. Step firmly, but also lightly and tactfully.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a brilliant intellect, a magnetic personality and unusual versatility. You could succeed in either the business world or in artistic areas—depending on your inclinations and education, of course. Among the arts at which you could especially shine are music, architecture or acting, where your lively imagination could be given full play. Other fields suited to your varied talents include the law, medicine, education and writing. Birthdate of: Van Cliburn, Amer. pianist; Henry D. Dear Abby...

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for 16 years and have four children. The oldest is 15 and the baby is 2. My husband (I'll call him "Joe") is a NCO in the U.S. Army. I thought our marriage was solid, but when he came home last month after serving 18 months in Korea, he seemed quiet and moody. Then he dropped a bombshell in my lap when he told me he had "fallen in love" with an 18-year-old Korean girl who is now four months pregnant with his child!
He says he loves me but can't turn his back on this girl because when she was 17, she had a baby by a Canadian soldier who deserted her.
Joe wants to divorce me, go back to Korea, marry this girl and bring her (and her child) here, so she can have her baby here. He says in time she may find another man to love and marry her, then he'll divorce her and marry me. Joe is 38 and I am 35. I know he really loves me, but he feels guilty about what he did in Korea and takes pity on this girl. I told him I loved him too much to divorce him. (Was that wrong?)
I know if I let him go to marry her, he'll regret it later. What do you advise?
HEARTSICK IN TEXAS

DEAR HEARTSICK: I think you're wise to hold off rushing into a divorce. Although Joe doesn't deserve any good conduct medals for his behavior in Korea, it's to his credit that he's willing to accept the responsibility for his actions.
An alternative plan would be to send the Korean girl money for her confinement and child support. It makes more sense than breaking up a 16-year-old, four-children marriage so that he can hastily marry a 18-year-old girl, divorce her later and remarry you again.
The word from here is to hang in there and keep your marriage intact. Good luck. Let me know what you decide to do. I care.

DEAR ABBY: SINGLE SIMON wrote to say that as a bachelor he is through accepting party invitations unless he can bring his own date. And you said that most hostesses invite bachelors to provide escorts for the single women.
The concept that most bachelors are invited to parties only to provide escorts for single women is a screaming insult to all single men!
Why must a party have an equal number of men and women? There is no need for a man or woman to feel out of place at a party without a partner unless, of course, the party is an orgy.
SINGLE BY CHOICE

DEAR SINGLE: For my part, guests should be invited to parties for their personalities—and not to balance the number of males and females. (P.S. I've never attended an orgy, but I am under the impression that any number can play.)

DEAR ABBY: How can a woman tell for certain whether a man's proposal of marriage is sincere?
PROPOSED TO

DEAR PROPOSED: If a woman doesn't know a man well enough to know whether he's sincere or bluffing, she doesn't know him well enough to marry him.

DEAR ABBY: We have one child, 17, I'll call "Brenda." She's a normal, average child, and a little spoiled, but she's never given us any trouble.
Brenda has never washed a pair of hosiery or ironed a blouse because her mother wouldn't let her. She's never even made her own bed. My wife was a personal maid for this child. Brenda was never allowed to spend a night at a girlfriend's house or a week at summer camp.
Now the subject of college is at hand, and Brenda has applied to several.
My wife says, "Brenda doesn't have to go out of town. The local college is good enough." Brenda wants to go away to college, and I think she should, but her mother can't hear of it without bursting into tears. What should be done?
BRENDA'S DAD

DEAR DAD: You appear to have one neurotic female on your hands. Do you want to try for two? Ask your clergyman, family doctor or someone whose opinion your wife values to speak to her.
She must be made to realize that her attachment to her daughter is unhealthy. Brenda needs freedom to develop some self-reliance, and her mother desperately needs to develop some outside interests.

Some Quick Ones The older a man gets, the further he walked to school. Most people don't mind suffering in silence, if they're sure everybody knows they are. Confession may be good for the soul but it's bad for the reputation. Some folks would rather be wrong than be quiet.

BREAKER

Changes- for better or worse

Greetings, all you fine people out there. The monthly B.B.C.-G.R.S. GENERAL meeting held at Super Thief's and Super Cookie's 20 last Thursday night brought about some changes (for better or worse tho', yet remains to be seen). Out own lovable Tootie resigned as P.R. man and I was elected to carry on this column tho' I did try to decline but my pleas fell upon 18 sets of every deaf ears. (And who says C.B.'ers have good ears?) So O, with the help?? of Little Mama, who so generously elected to help, we shall proceed to carry on this weekly column (news and publisher permitting) and hope we can do as good a job as Tootie did in the past. I'm quite certain Little Mama will sit back and censor this before it hits the paper, while I do all the work. Jam tart, Tootie...

A letter of appreciation was read to the members by Cricket, from Geronimo, Fifi and family on behalf of Uncle Sam, thanking our club for their donation of $300. Uncle Sam is still a patient in a Vanc. hospital and we're glad to say he's coming along, slow but sure. It was great having a landline OSO with him and he passes all the good number to everyone. To you, Uncle Sam, we all wish you a speedy recovery, we miss you, so hurry home. Four new members were welcomed into our club, those being Stoneface, whoops, I mean Rockcrusher and his xyl Pebbles, and Big Dipper and his xyl Little Dipper. Welcome folks and glad to have you on board.

With the coming up of the Prince George Jamboree, July 29 till Aug. 1 all the talk tends to swing to it what with alot of the locals heading down to take it in. Remember tho', that the 16th is the deadline set to have your registrations in. Admittance is by registration only so please bear that in mind. The B.B.C.'ers are signing in as such in hopes that we can bring home the farthest represented club trophy. For any of you that would like to join our club and go down as one of us, you can still do so by getting in touch with Super Cookie on L16.

A special thanks is extended to Mr. Bill Young for his generosity in letting people with a valid XM number take in a member of their family or a friend free to see the show Breaker, Breaker that was showing last week. This show was really good as proof by the audience cheering in certain parts. Yours truly enjoyed it so much that the embarrassment of having a part of a chocolate bar melt all down the front of a light colored pair of slacks didn't appear until the lights came on and we crawled out. (fast too)

A really great bunch of people arrived here from Alberta and being good C.B.'ers we went down to help welcome them to our town. Those being welcomed were Mr. and Mrs. Dee Jay, Loose Caboose and his xyl Blue Bird, Mr. and Mrs. Horse Shoe and Mr. and Mrs. Southern Drifter. A fun evening was had by all around the campsite, especially when Geronimo did his thing and made them members of the Tomahawk Tribe, not to say nothing of having Mrs. Dee Jay and Mrs. Horse Shoe go thru the embarrassment of being made a Tomahawk Squaw. Can well imagine what they'll be telling the folks back home, but I'm fairly sure they'll remember us and come back again. (O.K., I'm number 5 too)

Speaking of Geronimo, as most of you already know, next week is the last week before the Big contest. For most of

Speaking of Geronimo, as most of you already know, next week is the last week before the Big contest. For those of you not in the know, the annual Peanut Butter Marathon is on and again Geronimo is running for king and we've got to stand behind him so Please all you people out there, get your peanut butter sandwich in to the mail as soon as possible to Geronimo at 2806 Molitor Street. He's got to win for all of us, 10-4?

On the less serious side now, seems we can look forward to the "new look" among one of our members. Wolverine has broke down and gotten himself a hair cut. (and he asks why no-one recognizes him now??)

Applications are now being processed for the newest club in town, this being the B.K.B.S. (Borsch Klum bia Bohonk Sidebanderski). Only requirement to join is a kubsasca. Contact Super Thief or Rockcrusher.

Overheard Tootie apologizing to Super Cookie for not sitting on her organ. not that it doesn't sound as good as his, only it's much smaller and this is what comes from having too many people and not enough seating??

Papa and Mama Boots arrived home from their holidays with beautiful tans only something went wrong with Papa Boots. His chest hair only bleached white. What kind of a colony did you say that was again, Papa Boots??

The great frog race was won by none other than yours truly. Not bad for a Uke, huh Fifi?? Oh well, just keep practicing and you'll get better. Bunny, in case you find you can't attend the next meeting, be sure to send along the chocolate cake anyhow. There was something wrong with the last one...it didn't last long enough.

Question for the week?? Who's the lady that sat back waiting for the net to come on only to realize very late that she was the one who was suppose to call it?

Got to go 10-7 for the nite now, any comebacks from this column and you all know where to find me, 10-4? Meantime, have a good week, keep smiling and we'll catch you on the return.

Unforgettable Emily Carr

By HANSI BHAGWANANI

She died 32 years ago. But she still lives.

The West Coast Indians called her Klee Wyck, "the laughing one", but that's not all. She was also known as "Small", "Dummy", "Motor", "Carlight", "Bud mammy" and "Mom".

She was as good a painter as a writer and as talented a pot and rug maker as a designer.

Yes, Emily Carr, 1871-1945, the greatest Canadian artist is today respected, honoured and admired. On July 8th, 1977, she received added recognition: the Emily Carr Gallery was opened in Victoria.

This new home of Miss Carr is in the 106 year old Rithet Building at 1117 Wharf Street. Though it has been transformed into a modern building, it still has its quaint and charming look. The magnificent brickwork with archways leading to the gallery literally take you back to the good old days of the 19th century.

Miss Carr's beautiful paintings, sketches, self-portraits and family photographs in big fine frames are displayed with copies of documents telling you all you wanted to know about this well-known British Columbia artist.

It is interesting to note that her father, Richard Carr, had a provision and commission business on the same street where the new gallery is located.

Emily was born in Victoria in 1871. She studied art in England from 1899-1904 and in France from 1910-1911. She opened a studio and taught in Vancouver until her return to Victoria in 1913. Here she lived for the rest of her life.

The sea, the rain forests, the mountains, the totem poles and the village scenery overwhelmed her.

Not objects but impressions were her true subject matters.

"Eccentric" Carr, as she was sometimes described, wandered among the West Coast Indians, painting on canvas what she saw and also recording her impressions in words.

"The Laughing One" had little enough to smile about. Illness and lack of public response to her art had a distinct effect upon her work. For 15 years she ran a rooming house and bred and sold English dogs for a living.

Fame took a long time in coming. In 1927, Emily's paintings were recognized and proved valuable through the exhibition of Canadian West Coast Art, sponsored by the National Gallery. Fifty-seven of her 60 paintings that were displayed were sold.

Being a gifted writer, Carr's first book, Klee Wyck won the Governor General's Award in 1941.

As late as 1972, one of her paintings was sold to the highest bid in an auction for $24,000.

The display of Klee Wyck's work in the Emily Carr Gallery is tribute to this great artist. It has over 20 of her works - drawings, sketches, watercolours and oils. Her large self-portraits show the transformation of Emily's face through age.

The Gallery complements the attractive Emily Carr House on Victoria's Government Street, where the artist was born. The house also displays some of her works.

Miss Carr died in 1945 and 50 people attended her funeral. Her physician, Dr. Baillie, remarked sadly on that sorrowful day: "If Victoria knew her value, there would have been 5,000 people present today."

Klee Wyck, "the laughing one", and Emily Carr, the greatest Canadian artist, never died. She still smiles and lives through her work, in the hearts of her countrymen.

Attention all community organizations in British Columbia.

Canada Works is your federal job creation program in British Columbia, and it's ready to help your community organization or municipality serve your fellow citizens. But remember, the deadline for application is August 26.

Once again, you have the opportunity to create jobs and lasting benefits for your community.

If your idea is good, and your group has the will and the expertise to see it through, Canada Works may be able to provide the necessary funding.

Here's how to get things under way. Agree on a project you can all support. Think it through. How many jobs will it create? How much for salaries and other costs? Who will run the project on a day-to-day basis? Then go to your local Canada Manpower Centre or Job Creation Works Branch Office and pick up a Canada Works application and "Guide to Applicants."

The application is not complicated, but please supply full details and fill it out clearly and accurately. Please remember that your project, whatever it is, should make use of and add to the skills of the unemployed in your area, helping them to re-enter the work force on a full-time basis. Canada Works is for your community. Your province. Your country. For all of us. So let's get working on some new ideas.
